Sprint goal - do our best

The following was our burndown chart taken on July 5th at 7pm. There appears to be a jump in story points at the end of the graphs since a story was marked as “to-do” so that it could be divided into smaller tasks. There were also child issues added to some of the user stories, so that might have increased the story points.

	Commitment	Completed
REN Sprint 1	0	30
REN Sprint 2	0	15

These velocity reports might not be accurate, since we didn’t know much on how to use jira so it appears as if we didn’t plan on having any work done, but ended up completing 30 and 15 points of work. However, we definitely saw a decrease in how many points we completed, which can mostly be attributed to us having midterms during this past week, so we didn’t have as much time to complete tasks. We also began to work on more complex tasks, so less points were completed (we didn’t know user stories could be divided into smaller tasks, so we weren’t marking as done until all the user story was done).
